Support the channel.Prior art power output monitoring circuitry for a railway transmission line typically generates a single peak value that is indicative of the allowable power to the railway. This peak value is used as a measure of the power delivered to the transmission line. In the past, a power output monitoring circuit output signal was compared to a single threshold value to determine whether or not the transmission line had sufficient power. For a given set of conditions, the threshold value and the power monitoring circuitry was designed to provide a desired power level to the railway. However, it may be possible that this single peak value may be slightly inaccurate such that there is a minimal deviation from the single peak value. Such an error is unacceptable for a railway transmission line. Additionally, the correction circuitry in the prior art may be unable to accurately correct the power level of the transmission line for this single peak value. Therefore, it is 6d1f23a050
